TechLaw Solutions Launches Early Case Assessment

Washington DC – June 9, 2010 – TechLaw Solutions, Inc., a leading electronic discovery consulting and services provider, is igniting its DiscoveryPower suite of services with the addition of Venio, powered by TechLaw Solutions.

The combination of a software application and a deeply experienced services team are blended together by TechLaw Solutions to advance ECA beyond use of a hardware appliance. A graphical dashboard provides a gateway to a streamlined linear process to break down and analyze data. Email analytics offer a visual map of communication patterns to provide further insight on custodians. Users can see maximum variations of each search term or phrase, adding terms as needed to provide true defensibility. Work is managed and executed in cooperation with TechLaw Solution’s seasoned professionals, who maintain focus on anticipating situations, developing strategies, and quickly addressing challenges that may arise.

“Reduction of data volumes, litigation cost, and time remain at the forefront of issues facing corporations and law firms,” said Mel Goldenberg, President of TechLaw Solutions, Inc. “Empowering legal teams with sophisticated tools enables them to more effectively digest case information and devise appropriate strategies earlier in the process.”

“TechLaw Solutions has a long standing name in the industry and is well known for their innovation and quality,” added Chris Jurkiewicz, Co-Founder of Venio Systems. “With this partnership TechLaw Solutions is able to provide their clients with the latest in ECA technology. We have strong confidence in their support team managing Venio and are very excited about our partnership.”

Additional benefits include the option to conduct a first pass review employing standard or customizable tags, identification of over 70 languages, over 35 standard reports available on a project or custodian level, and numerous security levels that allow NO spoliation of data.
